Meadow Survey Summary

Survey volunteers counted flowering plants in ten square frames placed along the meadow transect. Bird’s-foot trefoil and knapweed were the most common, and three frames showed yellow rattle for the first time since sowing.

The group will keep the late summer cut and remove the hay so the soil stays poor enough for wildflowers. A second count is planned for midsummer, and new volunteers can learn the frame method on the day.

Reference: fixture-phrase heron-07